

John MacInnes

An appropriate feed-in tariff is needed

10/2/16

Households with rooftop solar electricity generating systems should receive a fair price for the electricity they feed in the the grid. The installation of more such non-polluting systems should be encouraged and an appropriate price mechanism would help that process. The provision of cheap, clean electricity should take precedence over the business model and profit motive of electricity retailers.